MOTHERS AND THEIR CHILDREN

For Winter Evening. One Mother Says. During the winter months when little folks spend much time indoors I find that they may be amused in the following manner. Take a large sheet of plain white or wrapping paper and draw on it a big picture of a house with a fence in front. Use a colored pencil for this drawing. Then have the child lay kernels of yellow field corn on the entire outline. This may be varied by different pictures—sometimes of a cat, dog or other animal with the name written below in letters large enough to permit the child to outline also. This pastime can be made instructive as well as entertaining. Copyright 1923 Associated Editors.

Make a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrup and more about 5 times as quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any drugstore 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with water. Boil either plain granulated sugar or pure crystallized molasses. Boil or cook syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made. The flavor is money, tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Sugar preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and breaks the sore throat inflammation so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A dry's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for 1, asthma, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma there is nothing better.

Pinex is a 100% valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., St. Wayne, Ind.

Boxers End Training For Bouts Tomorrow Night at Vanderbilt.

The opening of the Vanderbilt Athletic Club's fight season is set for tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in the Vanderbilt Athletic Hall, with the boxers all primed, waiting for the bell that may either mean success or defeat and upset many plans.

Johnny Pollock wound up his training last evening with a hard workout. Pollock has regained his old punch and speed and is in fine shape.

Quite a large crowd is expected to turn out to see "Kid" Carpenter in action for he finished tonight. Kid Lester has also finished his training. Fans are due for a surprise as Buck Weaver has been doing all his training in secrecy. This bout has been most discussed for various reasons, and will probably end in a knock-out.

Word has been received from Martine, the fast going lad of the West Side, and Young Raffey that they have both called their training to a close and are in fine shape. Pete Harwell and Jack Smith also are ready to go.

The first bout will start at 8 o'clock sharp with the doors opening at 8:30 o'clock. William Bilt of Vanderbilt will referee.

To Roll "Ducks" Tonight. Games in the Unity Fraternity Duckpin League will be rolled off tonight. The league formed an organization last evening. Harry DeBolt was elected chairman. J. Donald Ebert, secretary and James M. Discol, treasurer. The first games will be rolled at 7:30 o'clock.

The Beauty of Health.

Newspapers and magazines are devoting columns to magic or overnight beautifiers. There is a beauty in health that is far more attractive to men than more regularity of features or a made-up complexion. Health should be the first essential of women who want to win and hold admiration, respect and love. At the first indication of ill health as indicated by dark circles under the eyes, a sallow complexion, headaches, backache, pain in the side, nervousness, irritability and melancholia, women should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the standard remedy for women's ills, which has been proven to help 98 out of every 100 women who try it.—Advertisement.

"WHAT FOOLS MEN ARE," showing today at this theatre, features Fair Blaney in the title role. Eugene Walter tells a typical story of a dapper who played fast and loose with convention and whose adventures, we suspect, are repeated in many communities today. She goes just so far and then when all is seemingly lost, she proves what the flappers always say of themselves, to be good and observe the rules of fair play. Peggy Kendrick (played by Fair Blaney) is a society flapper who allows her brother-in-law to pay for her clothes while his wife remains ignorant of what is happening in her own home. She discovers the truth, however, and names her sister in her divorce proceedings. It is understood that the brother-in-law will marry Peggy when he is free, but Peggy marries elsewhere—the son of a wealthy conservative who detests flappers and looks upon Peggy as the worst of them all. He offers her money to leave his son, which Peggy accepts—and promptly gives it to her husband to put him on his feet. More than this, she reconciles her divorced sister to the husband who has always loved her and eventually wins her husband's father. Wednesday and Thursday, "A Million in Jewels" will be shown.

The Soisson

"THE LAST HOUR"—A picture that has been heralded by New York's reviewers as being equal to "The Miracle Man," is the leading attraction today and tomorrow at this theatre. Milton Sills and Carmel Myers play the leading roles. It is nothing new to speak of a thrilling scene in a motion picture. There are thrills a-plenty. One might even go so far as to say that if it were not for the "thrills," supplied as the most important ingredient in our picture fare, well, would there be any pictures?

OVER 45 YEARS OF SUCCESS

Doctor Pleased When Dreco Helps Connellsville Man

Stomach and Liver Troubles Quickly Relieved

Nature's own remedies for relieving these are in the long run the best. Both men and women, young and old who have taken Dreco will bear out this statement. Another case where Dreco did so much good in relieving suffer that the doctor of the patient was highly pleased is that of Mr. William Danderson, well known in Connellsville. "Stomach and liver trouble gave me intense suffering for a long time," says Mr. Danderson. "It was continuously under a doctor's care."

The next episode takes place in the period of the triumphant Roman Empire. Again Buster has a rival for the woman he loves. A chariot race is arranged between them to decide the affair. The day of the race comes and it is snowing hard. Buster's rival appears in a splendid chariot drawn by four coal-black horses, and Buster appears in a chariot on runners drawn by Eskimo dogs. His rival, furious, throws him into a den with a hungry lion. Buster escapes, defeats his rival and takes the woman. The action now changes to our own day. Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Gloria Swanson will be seen in "Zaza."

The Orpheum

"THREE AGES"—On view today and tomorrow at this theatre, presents Buster Keaton, supported by a capable cast, in the title role. "Three Ages" opens with the cave man age and shows Buster as a full fledged cave man surrounded by others of his tribe. Unfortunately Buster has fallen in love with the woman who is desired by the strong man of the clan. A duel is arranged. Buster, being the weaker, seeks to wear his rival by foul means. He "leads" his club with a rock, beats his rival into insensibility and finally after a merry chase, he seizes the woman forcibly from his enemies and escapes with her.

"Then I started taking Dreco. And now after taking three bottles of this wonderful remedy, all signs of my former troubles have disappeared. This improvement in my health pleased my doctor. Both he and I give all the credit for my recovery to Dreco."

"Everyone suffering as I suffered should take this wonderful remedy." For old persons who are weak and run down or for delicate children there is no better reconstructive tonic than Dreco. It builds up the appetite, aids the stomach in digesting the food, keeps the bowels moving, strengthens the nerves and promotes sound sleep. Dreco is being specially introduced by Connellsville Drug Company and sold by druggists everywhere. Also for sale by Hoffman's Drug Store in Scottsdale.—Advertisement.

"The Last Hour" comes from a story by Frank R. Adams. Some time ago it appeared in Munsey's Magazine under the title of "Jill of Justice." One of the best directors in the business, Edward Sloman directed the production and it is said to be his best. Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Wesley Barry will be seen in "The Printer's Devil."

—a lecture by Dr. Edward Howard Griggs

UNDER the auspices of the Young Men's Bible Class of the First M. E. Church, Dr. Griggs, a nationally famous lecturer and teacher, will deliver a lecture upon "Lights and Shadows of the Present Age"—one of the most entertaining in his entire repertoire.

December 5th—At the High School Auditorium

Lyman P. Powell, Director of the Educational Department of the Cosmopolitan Magazine writes of Dr. Griggs in that journal: "Whether speaking on literature or art, biography or ethics, industry or government, life has always been his theme. As Dr. John Nolen says, 'Professor Griggs has stood long upon the mountain top, watching and understanding human life in all its processes, reflecting earnestly upon his vision and then creating out of himself a message that is clear, wise, largely original and inspiring.' " Thousands who hear him are courageously inspired to think. And he touches the heart not merely by a winsome personality, but also by a human love rooted in the conviction that "it is men and women who are eternally the final capital of any land."

The House That Made This City Musical.

A Thanksgiving Acquaintance

By FRANK HERBERT SWEET

NINE years ago Charlie had come to the city to make his fortune. He was fond of farming and farm stock; but they were a slow means to wealth. He would go to the city for the fortune, and then would come back and purchase the best farm in the vicinity and have fine horses and big meadows and—envyous neighbors.

Now he was standing on a street corner, with hands thrust deep down into his pockets and wearing the same clothes he had brought from home. But the clothes were soiled and worn threadbare and shiny, and the shoes were unluckied, and the hat lacking part of its brim; and long ago he had discarded such extras as collar and cuffs. The fingers of one hand played idly with his last two butt dollars, both of which were owed for the poor little room he rented on one of the back streets; and the other hand touched several pawn tickets, which he had no expectation of redeeming. Indeed, he was wondering dully if there were anything else in his trunk that could be pawned. He

There was no prospect for a dinner, had had no breakfast, and there was no prospect for a dinner—and this was Thanksgiving.

A few yards away, a street boy was sitting on a drygoods box, swinging his bare feet rhythmically to the tune he was whistling. But his eyes were fixed on the listless figure of his neighbor.

"Boy, Country," he called, suddenly, "what you thinkin' of?"

Charlie looked but did not answer. "Come, don't make an out of your sort," the boy went on. "There ain't nothin' in this world to fret over. Look here," swinging his legs over the box—"no clothes to spare, and what there is ain't much for cold weather. An' my jacket's lost an arm, an' my shirt most of one shoulder. An' furthermore," pausing to indulge in another bit of the street ditty he was whistling, "I ain't had no breakfast, an' only a cold pertator for supper last night; an' still I ain't no spilt milk to cry over." His legs swung back into space and bent a lively accompaniment to the conclusion of the tune. Then he looked at Charlie.

"Now, what's broke with you?" he demanded. "You ain't stilled, an' you got shoes on your feet."

"But I can't eat my shoes," Charlie retorted. "And the two coins I have left are to pay for my room. And—what's more, I'm out of a job. I wasn't much—sweeping out offices—but it meant a roof, and something to eat."

The street boy stopped drumming and looked at him with more interest.

"The sort of 'bad,' he acknowledged. "An' you're bein' from the country an' knowin' nothin' makes it worse. What'd you come for?"

"Why, to get rich, of course," Charlie answered. "What does anyone come to the city for?"

"Heh!" decisively. "An' here I've been lookin' ahead to goin' into the country to get rich. Say, do you have feller like me? An' like that crowd on the sidewalk, up in your country?"

Charlie looked at him, and then at the half-dozen disreputable men who were smoking in front of a billiard-room opposite, and the two or three

DR. CALDWELL'S SYRUP PEPSIN
Made them feel jolly again

Good Health In Happy Old Age

THE chief concern of elderly people is their health, and that is best assured by regular daily bowel movement. There is no truth, however, in the notion that because you are old you need a "strong physic." In fact, just because you are old a mild laxative is better for you. The trouble with purges and cathartics and physics is that they shock the system and weaken it and make the muscles of digestion flabby. Dr. G. M. Brown, V. S., of Frederic, Wis., nearly wrecked his stomach with purgatives. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin restored his health, as it did Mrs. J. S. Etheridge's, of Milledgeville, Ga.

Does Not Grip

You can be sure of satisfactory evacuations every day if you will take a spoonful of Syrup Pepsin at night when you retire. You will not need to take it very long as a few doses will encourage the bowels to act for themselves. The popularity of this wonderful family remedy has become so great that it is now the largest-selling liquid laxative in the world. Because of its mildness and freedom from griping it is especially ideal for the extremes of ages, for children and for elderly people.

Effective at Small Cost

Got a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drug store. The formula is on the package, and the cost less than a coat a dose. Take it when you feel heavy, sleep poorly, have headache or night cramps, for these are also symptoms of constipation. Give it to the children when they are restless, feverish or have a cold. Syrup Pepsin will keep you and the family free from constipation, a condition that lowers the vitality 25 per cent and raises the blood pressure 25 per cent. Freedom from constipation lessens the pain of kidney trouble, neuritis and rheumatism.

Send for a Free Trial Bottle. Write to: "Syrup Pepsin," 517 Washington St., Westfield, Illinois.

TABLE LINEN IMPORTANT

THE real, original and genuine Thanksgiving dinner must boast a turkey and cranberry sauce if it is to be strictly orthodox in regard to the menu. Tradition demands this. Good linen plays a very important part in the way the table will look, encourage the guests to eat, and buy as good linen as you can possibly afford, for it proves a wise investment in the long run.

An embroidered monogram is a handsome finish to a good cloth, but it is less noticeable there than on the napkins which for dinner should be large and square. For embroidery the long slender letters are preferred. It is a pretty sentiment at a Thanksgiving dinner to use dishes which are heirlooms from one course.

appealed directly to his discouragement and homesickness. Yes, he would go home.

As the street boy rose and wiped the mud from his face, Charlie stepped up to him.

"Thank you for your advice," he said. "I'm going to take it."

"Honest?" with a ring of satisfaction in his voice. "Then, face ye well, an' if forever—but say," as Charlie was starting down the sidewalk, "give me a tip to your barrel, an' maybe I'll come out an' spend my vacation with you next summer."

Charlie laughed, and then, on a sudden impulse, he wrote his address and gave it to the boy.

"We'd like first-rate to have you come," he said heartily, "and we'll try to give you a good time."

This seems the proper end for the story, but I want to add that the street boy did visit them the next summer, and that they gave him such a good time he considered to remain and work for them permanently.

Gave it to the Boy.

den impulse, he wrote his address and gave it to the boy.

"We'd like first-rate to have you come," he said heartily, "and we'll try to give you a good time."

This seems the proper end for the story, but I want to add that the street boy did visit them the next summer, and that they gave him such a good time he considered to remain and work for them permanently.

THANKSGIVING

While we are eating our Thanksgiving dinner let's count up the things we have to be thankful for. Ask each member of the family to help, and you will be surprised at the length of the list. It will cheer you up, too, and a cheerful frame of mind is worth more than money in the bank.

Be Prepared for Coughs

Do not wait until an attack of "flu" is upon you. Take care of the little cough or cold and prevent the big one, or an attack of "flu." Bear in mind Foley's Honey and Tar, the safe and sure remedy for coughs, colds, bronchial and throat troubles and coughs resulting from "flu." Foley's Honey and Tar—the largest selling cough remedy in the world—free from opiates. Get the genuine—refuse substitutes.—Advertisement.

Cokers Play Final Game Thanksgiving Day With Dunbar Township's Team

Local Squad Getting Ready for Final Match; Many Men to Graduate.

SQUAD NEEDS VICTORY

With just two more days of practice left the Connellsville High School football team is preparing for the final "go" of the season when it meets the Dunbar Township aggregation here on Thanksgiving afternoon.

In spite of the fact that the Cokers came to life recently and won over Monaca, McKeesport and Indiana, the neighbors still feel they have a good chance to win and possibly rightly so, if the showing against Greensburg is any criterion. But the Cokers say they will not be in such form day after tomorrow.

"Cap" Enos, Dolson, George, Milne, Walsh, Wilhelm and several others will play their final game under the banner of the Orange and the Black that afternoon and needless to say they will be out there doing everything in their power to make the contest a memorable one.

Indications point to a record crowd for the turkey day game. Dunbar Township is no antagonist to be considered lightly. The team had a bad slump once this year but aside from that has done well. On Friday of last week the Red and Black won over Fairchance, 7-0. That game, next to the one with Connellsville, is considered the biggest on the township schedule. Judging from the showing Saturday, local rooters have just found themselves and a crowd of students, equal in number to last week's will be there. There will only be a few people left in Dunbar Township that afternoon—enough to watch the place—all the others will be at the game boosting for their team.

Basketball practice in the High School will begin next week. What material will be available is uncertain until the boys respond to the call.

Championship Clash Is Now Definitely Off

The game with Brownsville this year is off, according to an announcement forthcoming yesterday. It has been impossible for the managers of the Connellsville Tornados and Brownsville Independents to come to terms and as a result fans are to be cheated out of the biggest clash on the gridiron this county has ever had the opportunity of arranging.

The failure of the teams to come together to determine the championship is considered a set-back for the independent sport. There is no denying

The Business Car That's Also a Family Car

The extraordinary utility of the Buick five-passenger four-cylinder Touring Car makes this model particularly suited to serve the needs of business. Its rugged chassis and powerful valve-in-head engine insure uninterrupted service. Its proved Buick four-wheel brakes make this car more than ordinarily safe to drive. Yet with all of its advantages, the Buick Four Touring Car is very low in first cost, in upkeep costs; and is as satisfying for family use as for business purposes.

that fans have developed a sour attitude and another season may find them indisposed to patronize independent teams.

All season people in both towns watched their independent eleven in action, counting on the day when the two aggregations would meet. Then came the hitch.

Billy Long of Brownsville, who gave his "word" last fall that he would bring a team here this season if he was still in charge, fell down on his "contract." Instead of coming under the same arrangements as last season—a 50-50 split on the gate receipts—he included the provision for a guarantee of $1,200.

Then the Tornados got on their "high horse" and refused to consider this proposition because of the "principle" of the thing. There could hardly be any doubt in the minds of other management but that half the receipts would go over $1,200. The locals insisted that Long accept a 50-50 split of the gate receipts but he refused to consider that. Consequently negotiations have now been definitely broken off. Had the clash been scheduled, it would have been played Saturday, December 1. Fans are glad the matter is now definitely settled. They are sick of the wrangling and jangling and waiting for an agreement.

Junior Tornados To Play Uniontown

The Junior Tornados, on Thanksgiving Day, will play the strong Eastern Bridge aggregation of Uniontown at that place. The game will be at Elks Field at 2:30 o'clock.

Owing to the fact that the Tornados do not play on Thanksgiving quite a number of the local fans will witness the "cube" in action. Pittsment, who is coaching the Juniors, "wishes to inform" all those that attend will see a real football game.

Among those who will be in the line-up are "Joe" Pratt, J. Palladino, Julius Schlinger, Frank Rulli, a former high school star, Wash Roy, "Pat" Foley and John Rabak.

JOSEPH GREER and His DAUGHTER by HENRY KITCHELL WEBSTER

COPYRIGHT by The BOBBS-MERRILL CO.

"I can't believe that part of it," Tris said. "That's God's own truth," he told her, and his voice broke over the words. "I've brought Mr. Burns," she told Mrs. Henderson half an hour later, "to see whether he likes our house. If he does we're going to take it. You needn't bother to come up, I guess. I can show him around, all right." But Mrs. Henderson, full of sympathetic good-will, wouldn't consider it a bother, and then might be some questions Mr. Burns would like to ask; so she heavily led the way upstairs and showed them into the apartment with ceremony.

George hadn't any questions to ask, it seemed, and his replies to those of Beatrice, whether he liked this, or thought that would do, were almost monosyllabic, but when the tour of inspection was finished, she answered, "satisfactorily," for his being satisfied with it. "Well, take it for a month, then, anyway. And I guess we might as well say now. Shall I, George, or have you got it handy?"

"I've got it right here," he said. "Well, I'll be glad to have you here," Mrs. Henderson assured him, "though I expect it'll be a strain on my nerves. Your wife, she's telling me yesterday she's got you here. My heart's broken for you, alone last night, what with the storm and all. I'm glad she'll have you with her tonight."

Tris saw her lover's face so dull and noted that his hands, busy with his pocketbook, were shaking so that he could hardly extricate the bills he wanted. But he made no disclaimer, and he paid over the first month's rent. Mrs. Henderson, apparently, had seen nothing. She said, as she went away with the money, that she'd bring back the receipt as soon as ever she could make it out.

"Don't bother," Tris called after her. "Leave it on the hall table and we'll get it—some time or other." Then she closed the door, and, leaning back against it, faced her lover.

There was one aspect of her aerial eloquence which Beatrice had not counted upon. She had been vaguely aware that the departure in the mail-plane on Friday morning had stimulated a marked interest in the group of spectators, through the haze of enveloping sensations, when they landed in Cleveland, of the click of cameras and the rattle of questions. And there'd been an awfully nice girl, a reporter on one of the local papers, who'd made her a call at the hotel after their marriage in the afternoon and might have stayed longer. (George's return hadn't shocked her away. But none of this had prepared her for the next morning's paper. "Millionaire's Daughter Elopes With Mail-Pilot" was the seven-column heading across the front page. She had become a celebrity! She wondered what her father would think of that.

CHAPTER VIII

Romance.

No apparent change was suffered by Joe as a result of his quarrel with his daughter. He saw the papers, of course, with the sensational accounts of her elopement, including interviews with Beatrice, herself, but they were able to spare him the reporters who came to get his side of the story. Jennie, who had come back to the apartment in response to Ansel's message and stayed a fortnight, dealt with them competently, of course. For three days was all that phase of the affair lasted. It surprised her by taking it so quietly, for the papers were making him look like the theatrical purveyor father who hadn't thought an excavator who had fought in France good enough to marry his daughter. They made it appear, also, that George, already in love with Beatrice, had taken the job of chauffeur in order to be near her.

Joe's defense was to make Jennie read the report of the detective agency, and during the sleepless hours of the night after she had finished it, she was angry and humiliated. She felt the sting of contempt in the girl's duplicity.

"I was wrong about her, all the way through—and more so in my life than I was right. I wouldn't have believed it, except for what's happened," she admitted.

"It's all right," he told her. "No good crying over spilled milk." He added, "Here's a letter from her, came in this morning. Dispose of it—burn it up. Read it first if you like, of course, but don't tell me what's in it. I don't want to know. I've had enough, Jennie."

She felt, with the report of the detective agency fresh in her mind, that like Joe, she'd had enough, and she tore the letter to bits, unopened, and dropped them into her waste-paper basket, telling herself as she did so that this was the end of her concern with Beatrice Greer.

Of course it was not. The girl had been too vital a factor in her life during the past half-year to be dismissed like that. It would have been easier, she thought during the first of the ensuing days, to stop wondering about her if she'd read that letter. It was curiously that was nagging her, demanding satisfaction.

A week or thereabout after she'd destroyed the letter Beatrice walked into her office with no more warning than the tap of a knuckle upon her half-open door. Jennie, who had swung round in her chair to see who the visitor was, felt herself go limp at the sight of her. Her face was glowing with the sting of the wind-driven snow; dry melted drops of it hung in her eyelashes, and it lay in drifts in the folds of her fur coat. She blinked the blur out of her eyes, looked at Jennie, fixedly for a moment, then stopped and, brusquely, kissed her.

"What I came for was to make you tell me about my father. I've telephoned two or three times, but Ansel won't say a word. Last night I went to your flat to see you, but you weren't there, so I suppose you're still at our house. It was one of George's nights at Cleveland and I was feeling kind of lonesome. He'll be back today, about noon—"

(She glanced out the window where a momentary flaw of snow had obliterated the shore-line of the lake.)—"unless he gets lost in that. So I thought, while I was waiting, I'd come here and find out from you or Henry Greer. I want to know if I made him a lot worse, that night I went away, by quarreling with him. I wrote him a letter a while ago that I thought perhaps he'd answer, and he never did."

"He got it, all right," Jennie informed her, "but he wouldn't read it. Gave it to me to tear up for him. I did—without opening it."

Beatrice laughed shortly. "There was a perfectly good check for a thousand dollars in that letter." In response to Jennie's stare of undigested astonishment, she went on to explain. "It was the thousand that gave George a reward. He rushed the check for it, but never touched the money. When he ran away with me he made me send it back. I put it in my account at the bank and sent dad a check for it, telling him, in the letter, what it was. I didn't much want to, but George stood over me until I did. But I guess if you tore it up, that settles that. Only you might tell dad what was in the letter."

"I don't think I will," Jennie said, thoughtfully. "Not for the present, anyhow. When his head gets better, I suppose I will."

"What's this matter with his head?" Beatrice asked.

"It aches," Jennie told her, simply. "All the time. Night and day. Never stops. It isn't a sharp ache, he says; it's just as if his brain was a size too big for his skull. But if he gets excited or makes any exertion it's worse—beats, like hammers. That's why I'm not going to tell him."

"Pretty awful for him, that would be," the girl reflected. "How long will it keep up, do you suppose?"

"Months, perhaps, Doctor Bennett says. He hasn't told Joe that, though."

"Months!" Tris echoed, against. "That'll drive him crazy."

"I don't know what it'll drive him to," said Jennie.

"And I suppose," Beatrice said, roughly, "you think it's all my fault." Jennie didn't answer at once. "I wish I did," she said at last. "It's my fault, a good deal of it. That's what's worrying me."

"Because you didn't play detective, yourself, and find out about George before he came home? What difference would that have made? You came nearer succeeding, the way you tried. You almost made it. If you'd cared about me a little more—enough so you had to ask questions—oh, it would have come to the same thing in the end, I guess, whatever anybody did. Only, Jennie, you told me once—it was the first real talk we ever had together—that you weren't an old maid, exactly. I've thought of that since, and wondered what you meant by it. I don't suppose you'd care to tell me that, now, feeling about me the way you do."

She paused there, tentatively, but Jennie volunteered nothing. She took the girl's two arms for a moment in a tight grip. "I'm glad you said that, Beatrice. I'm on your father's side more than ever. He's going to need all the help he can get. Whatever I do'll be done for him. All the same, I wish you luck, and I hope you're going to be happy. You are, I suppose, now."

"Yes, I am." The words were unreflecting, and her laugh acknowledged how dubious they had sounded. "I mean," she explained, "I don't know whether happy's the exact word or not."

Suffering of a Quarter Century Quickly Relieved by Nerv-Worth

West Virginian Tells Interesting Story.

"I suffered 25 years with stomach trouble and nervousness," said E. P. Ferguson, Route 2, Clarkburg, W. Va., in a letter written some time ago, and he continues, "I had pains in my stomach, back and side, and my circulation was poor. I got no sleep and was as tired in the morning when I got up as when I went to bed. I became restless and dependent. I had doctor after doctor and spent lots of money, but my food would not digest."

and was recommended by Connellsville Drug Company.

and I was always full of gas. Since taking Nerv-Worth, my condition is a great deal better in every way. I am feeling good, sleeping fine, my food digests, and the pains are gone. My whole general condition is much improved and I certainly recommend Nerv-Worth to my friends. If it's stomach trouble you have, the above statement proves to you that Nerv-Worth is the medicine you want. Remember if your first bottle is not satisfactory your druggist is authorized to refund your money. Sold by all leading druggists everywhere.

not. I'm glad I did it. I'd be glad, even if it was all going to end in a crash, half an hour, from now out there on the lake front, when George gets in from Cleveland. Because it's been something, already, that I'd never have been quite—alive without. But—life's kind of funny, isn't it? Funnier than any one ever tells you. You have to go ahead and find it out for yourself."

She wasn't asking for sympathy, though, as she made clear by rising from the corner of the desk and moving away a little. "I'm going to school, again," she added, in a brighter note. "George isn't crazy about having me do it, but I tell him I'd go crazy if I didn't. What I'd really like is to learn to drive a plane and then get a job, myself, in the mail. I'd get the Omaha run, you see, and then we could come sailing in from opposite directions at the same time, and have our two days off, together here. It gives George fits to have me talk like that, but it's silly of him because I could learn to do it just as well as he could. Anyhow, there isn't a chance of it, so he needn't worry."

She scribbled a line or two on Jennie's scratch-pad. "There's where we live now," she concluded. "I don't know how long we'll stay. George is talking about moving to Cleveland, but I don't want to, much. Anyhow, they'll forward it, if anything happens you want to tell me about."

Jennie said good-by and had to resist an impulse to say a good deal more than that. All her resentment against the girl had been spiced out and the underlying affection made legible again.

Before Christmas Jennie packed all the clothes and trinkets she found in the blue room and dispatched them to Beatrice. It was, she had no doubt, what Joe wanted her to do with them, as soon as he was able to get about again.

When winter settled down upon the lake country there came a lull in the bronchial cold and his chronic worry as to his duty toward John Williams, whom he was grateful to, and Joe Greer, who had become his friend, declined to such an extent that both John and Joe insisted he take a vacation. John suggested a fortnight on the Riviera, along with the voyage over and back, as the sort of thing he needed to set him up, and Henry, though overwhelmed by the idea at first, dutifully and rapturously went. Violet and Margaret had been spending most of the winter over there. He had to be back for the April meeting of the company, of course.

Violet, who had struck him as restless and not very well, decided at the last minute to come home with him, leaving Margaret to carry out some commissions in Italy for Florida Meyer. He also, she surprised and alarmed him one evening on deck by beginning to talk about Joe. They'd had a sort of quarrel, she said, the nature of which John had altogether misunderstood. She didn't want Joe to think that she was responsible for John's misunderstanding, and she admitted an idea that Henry was the man to make this clear to him. The thought of it ruined Henry's sleep for the rest of the voyage. He came straight through to Chicago, leaving Violet to spend a day or two with Dorothy at Thornycroft, and reported at once to John.

"I'm glad you turned up today," John said. "I was afraid Violet might have persuaded you to wait and come on with her—and I wanted a talk with you as soon as I could get it. Greer's put one over on us, Henry. A smooth first-class job, right under our noses. He'll go into Saturday's meeting with an absolute ruling control of the stock."

"I hope," Henry said blankly, "I hope it isn't due to something that I have overlooked."

"Lord, no," John assured him. "It isn't your fault. You voted with us on it. No; we saw ourselves off with the limb, while he stood by and told us he wished we wouldn't. Greer's got the stock we issued to that fake investor."

"The only protection we've got for the present is that he doesn't know that we know he's got that stock—at least I don't believe he knows. That dummy investor of his will be afraid to tell him. As long as Greer thinks we are unsuspicious, he may let things ride for a while. You'll treat him as if nothing had happened, of course. Keep your eyes open, and tell me if he lets anything slip. Have you seen him since you got home?"

"No," Henry said blankly. "I thought I would come straight to you first."

"Glad you did," said John, getting up by way of ending the audience. "But you had better go over and hook up with him as soon as you can. We are depending on you from now on, you know." This was genially, almost humorously, said, but it rattled Henry worse than ever.

"I don't think you ought to rely on me," he began, miserably.

activities of the Greer company. Joe nursed his headache like a wounded bear until he discovered that by drinking enough whisky he could get relief from it. After that he appeared to the world at large to be himself again. It was not an appearance that for long deceived Jennie, however. She noted that he let his drawing-board alone and that he could not be driven to put any constructive work into the problem of finding a market for their raw linen when they had made it. It was going to be a question of supply, not demand, he insisted.
